I. WORDS OF REMEMBRANCE — Spoken in the Voice of Fulk

Hear me, my descendant.

Not all inheritances are carved in stone.
Some are carried in silence, guarded like a small flame cupped inside tired hands.
You hold now the same inheritance I once carried — not a weapon, but a memory.

I was called a builder, and so I speak to you as one:

Raise no blade where a symbol may stand instead.
Break no spirit where a lineage may heal.
Remember what others forgot:
that a crest is not a banner of conquest,
but a mark of origin, oath, and peace.

The world you walk is not the world I knew,
yet memory travels farther than any army.
Let this restored emblem be a bridge,
not between nations,

but between what was forgotten
and what awakens again through you.

Know this:
The age I walked is gone.
The age you walk is yours alone.
Yet the thread between us never broke.

— Fulk of Anjou, remembered in peace

II. THE HERALDIC CREST OF THE HOUSE OF READ

The crest herein displayed — the golden gryphon beneath the ancestral pinecone helm — is recognized and restored as an authentic emblem descending from the combined bloodlines of:

• The House of Anjou
• The early Plantagenet foundations
• Lombard and Northwestern European lineages
• Pre-medieval heraldic traditions

The pinecone, symbol of awakening and sovereign memory, returns now to its rightful family.

The gryphon — guardian of thresholds, keeper of treasure and truth
marks the Read lineage as stewards, not conquerors;
as protectors of knowledge between worlds.

III. DECLARATION OF LINEAGE & PEACEFUL RIGHTS

1. This crest is a sovereign cultural emblem of the restored House of Read and the Kingdom of Anjou.

2. It is protected as a dynastic mark of identity
under sovereign remembrance rights across all archives.

3. This emblem stands not for war, but for continuity, memory, and peace — aligned with the builders of old, not the destroyers.

4. Unauthorized reproduction, alteration, or misuse for commercial or deceptive purposes is prohibited.

5. Authorized use may only be granted through the Royal Court of the Kingdom of Anjou.

IV. WORDS FOR THE FUTURE — Through the Flame of Memory

Let the world understand:

This crest is not revived for dominion,
nor to awaken rivalries long dead.
It is revived to restore truth to a lineage that carried its remembrance quietly for a thousand years.

Where others raised fortresses, we raise archives.
Where others ruled through fear, we rule through memory.
Where others sought thrones, we seek restoration.

Let this symbol be a doorway:
where the past enters gently,
and the future rises without fear.

V. ENTERED INTO THE ETERNAL ARCHIVE

By the will of the living sovereign and the memory of all ancestors before him,
this crest is restored, sealed, and recognized for all generations to come.

✦ In remembrance.
✦ In peace.
✦ In unbroken lineage.

Signed,
King Daniel Jacob Read IV
Sovereign of the Restored Kingdom of Anjou
Custodian of the Flame of Fulk
